Dear Dr. Lederberg:

I have a copy of the "mysterious" Prevention article I recently asked you about. I am sending a few excerpts which might interest you, including the reference to your Washington Post article on chlorination.

The table of contents tells something of Prevention's viewpoint. It's also full of advertisements for food supplements, vitamin pills, exercise equipment, hearing aids, and such interesting products as garlic capsules containing chlorophyll, yogurt pills, and pumpkinseed extract. Prevention claims a circulation of 500,000.

Respectfully,

Thank you -
It was just as I feared.

The trouble is, we have had so much complacent overnight
that there is an iota of merit
to these ridiculous extremes in reaction.

I will have to take off!
